MONTANA WATER RIGHTS, COURT REFORM ARTICLES INCLUDED IN 1973 MONTANA LAW REVIEW

MISSOULA--

Articles ranging from Montana water rights to justice court reform are featured in the winter edition of the Montana Law Review, published and distributed by the University of Montana Law School.

Published semi-annually in the winter and the spring, the Montana Law Review is composed of articles and comments by members of the UM Law School faculty and students, and contributions submitted by experts in specific areas of the law.

Senior law students serve on the seven-member editorial board, according to John O. Mudd, Great Falls, editor-in-chief. Other students may serve on the staff and assist in the publication, Mudd said. John P. McCrory has served as faculty advisor.

"The articles cover a wide range of topics and should be of interest to both Montana lawyers and lay people," Mudd said.

The law review is distributed to UM law students, Montana Bar members and libraries throughout the country. Subscription price is $5 per year or $3.50 per issue.

Articles included in the latest edition are:

"An Annotated Checklist for the Federal Intrastate Exemption from Registration of Securities," by Hugh V. Schaefer, visiting associate professor of law at UM; "The Federal Estate Tax Marital Deduction in Montana: A Warning and Suggestions," by Lester R. Rusoff, UM professor of law; "The New Article Nine of the Uniform Commerical Code: An Introduction and Critique," by William C. Headrick, visiting associate professor of law; "Montana Water Rights--A New Opportunity," by Albert W. Stone, professor of law at UM; and "Consortium: An Action for the Wife," by William Leaphart and Richard E. McCann, both 1972 graduates of the UM law school.

Also included are comments by Uii law students entitled "The Montana Law of Valuation in Eminent Domain," by John F. Sullivan, Missoula, and "Justice Court Reform in Montana," by Lon T. Holden, Havre. Several other law students also have contributed to the latest edition, Mudd stated.

Members of the editorial board in addition to Mudd are: Sullivan and Holden; John S. Warren, Concord, Calif., business manager; Stuart L. Kellner, Helena, associate editor; Barry L. Hjort, Medicine Lake, comment and note editor; and Donald G. Meath, Missoula, associate editor.
